Thank you for being part in our Video Project. The following text shall explain the use of the filmed material. With your signature at the end of this document, you confirm your understanding of the Video Project while giving your consent to appear in the film and the credits.

The video material that the Researcher and his/her team are filming for the Video Project will be used to produce video clips and short films around the question of: “How does research contribute to the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals?”. The aim of the Video Project is to document and spread knowledge on how to achieve the SDGs and thereby improve the well-being of people world-wide.

The complete video clips and short films will be primarily disseminated on a digital online knowledge platform of the r4d programme, curated by the Swiss National Science Foundation and the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation, as well as through other appropriate online channels, events and conferences. None of the produced video clips and short films will be sold but they remain available under the Creative Commons License 4.0. This means that the produced video clips can be freely shared, though not re-edited.

The produced materials and derived formats will not be sold to anyone but are reserved for non-commercial, educational purposes. Participation by the Contributor is unpaid.

Copyright and rights of use of the raw material will remain with the r4d-Research Project for their communication activities. The rights of the produced video clips remain with the Producer. With this Personal Appearance Release you authorize the Producer and the r4d-Research Project to edit the filmed material. You also agree to be included in the video clips and short films as well as to your appearance on photos or screen shots with respect to the designated purpose of the Video Project as described above.
